FOURTH CIRCUIT JUVENILE REDEPLOY

REDUCED COMMITMENT TO IDJJ; IMPROVED
OUTCOMES FOR YOUTH AND FAMILIES.

What is Redeploy?

Redeploy Illinois seeks to decrease youth incarceration in Department of Juvenile Justice through evidence-based community programs that maintain public safety and promote positive outcomes for youth.

Why Redeploy?

Youth are being successfully treated in their own communities and kept from the devastation of incarceration, saving the state money, reducing the number of crime victims, and creating safer communities across Illinois.

Target Population

The target population for the Fourth Judicial Circuit Redeploy program includes youth who are 13-17 years of age, adjudicated delinquent for an offense punishable by an IDJJ commitment OR youth who are not facing an IDJJ commitment who are moderate to high risk with non-status misdemeanor or felony offenses, which may include some pre-adjudicated youth. If the youth meets the above criteria and the Court finds the juvenile appropriate for the Redeploy Illinois Program, the Court may then sentence the youth to the program.

WE CANNOT ALWAYS BUILD THE FUTURE FOR OUR YOUTH, BUT WE CAN BUILD OUR YOUTH FOR THE FUTURE.
--FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT

Research has found that non-violent youth are less likely to become further involved in criminal behavior if they remain in their home communities and receive appropriate services to address underlying needs such as mental illness, substance abuse, learning disabilities, unstable living arrangements and dysfunctional parenting.

Redeploy allows our youth and their families to have access to services that they would not otherwise be able to receive.
